Veterans program set for the Sevier Valley Center

Pahvant Elementary School is hosting its Veterans Program, "Hope of America," on Tuesday, Nov. 10, at 6 pm at the Sevier Valley Center.

This patriotic-themed event is free and open to students' parents and any other community members who would like to attend.

"We would love to honor all Veterans in attendance," Pahvant Principal Chad Johnson said.

Armistice Day was a way to honor those who had sacrificed so much in what was at that time one of the most destructive conflicts the world had seen up until that point. By 1938, it was made a legal holiday.

The scale of World War I was eclipsed by World War II, fought between 1939 and 1945. The name of the day was changed in 1954 following WWII and the Korean War to honor all who have served in the U.S. Armed Forces.

Water Year ends with dry total

The water year ended Sept. 30, with Richfield City experiencing its third consecutive year of a lower-than-average amount of precipitation from 2025-26.

The water year ended on Sept. 30 with 5.13 inches of precipitation recorded at the Mid-Utah Radio weather station in Richfield.

This marks the third consecutive year the precipitation for the year has finished below average. The average for the past 28 years is 7.56 inches and also lower than the previous year's total 5.88 inches.

Richfield's driest years in the past quarter century include 2001–02 (5.05 inches), 2008–09 (3.45 inches), 2017–18 (4.95 inches), and 2019–20 (4.55 inches).

The wettest years since 1999 were 1998–99 (10.18 inches), 2010–11 (12.49 inches), and 2022–23 (10.03 inches).

The Natural Resource Conservation Service noted in its Oct.1 Utah Water availability report that the state reached its peak snow pack on March 9 with 8.4" of snow water equivalent, a record low across the state. Some encouraging news is that the Lower Sevier River Basin received approximately 195 percent of average precipitation in September to end the water year. This brings the water year accumulation (October-September) to 84 percent of the median.
